HISTORY

The area known as Pyquaug by the Wongunk Indians was explored in 1633 by John Oldham. He and a group of men from the Massachusetts Bay Colony ("Ten Adventurers") spent the winter of 1634 in huts on the bank of the Connecticut River at what is now Wethersfield Cove. A larger group came the following year. First called Watertown, the name of the settlement was changed to Wethersfield for a town in Essex, England. The town of Wethersfield originally included the present towns of Glastonbury, Newington and Rocky Hill.
