WHY ORGANIC GARDENING ISN'T JUST A BUNCH OF MANURE.

Organic gardening is a lot more than natural fertilizer. And organic gardeners do a lot more than make your yard look pretty. They help make the environment healthier. So let's dig in and see how you can help. The first step to creating an environmentally friendly garden is to compost. Composting not only helps produce the bacteria, nutrients and much more plants need, it also reduces the amount of solid waste your home creates. Another easy way to help the environment in your garden is to change the tools you use. For instance, instead of using sprayers, try using soaker hoses. They leak moisture into the soil at slow rates, so water gets absorbed instead of running off. You may also consider using a rake, instead of gas-powered blowers. Rakes use no fuel and give you some exercise. Next, think about the types of plants you plant. Consider planting perennials. Perennial beds provide refuge for animals and insects that will eat pests and reduce your need for chemicals. Finally, think about planting a tree in your backyard. Trees do a lot more than keep harmful carbon dioxide from entering the atmosphere and create lots of energy-saving shade. So you see, when we say organic gardens are a good idea, it's no bull. This message brought to you by the 43 environmental charities that make up Earth Share. For more tips or information on how you can help, visit Earth Share, 3800 International Drive NW, Suite 2K (AD), Washington, D.C. 20008. Earth Share IT'S A CONNECTED WORLD DO YOUR SHARE.
