Shipbuilding and related industries provided employment for the residents of the town during the 19th century.

HISTORY

The area known as Pyquaug by the Wongunk Indians was explored in 1633 by John Oldham. He and a group of men from the Massachusetts Bay Colony ("Ten Adventurers") spent the winter of 1634 in huts on the bank of the Connecticut River at what is now Wethersfield Cove. A larger group came the following year. First called Watertown, the name of the settlement was changed to Wethersfield for a town in Essex, England. The town of Wethersfield originally included the present towns of Glastonbury, Newington and Rocky Hill.
